Traditional and modern, Delta and country blues, finger-style guitar instrumentals.

At age nine John started playing in neighborhood bands. At age 17 he was playing guitar for Charlie Pride, Willie Nelson, Jack Jones, and Conway Twitty. (John is much older now.)

John has written, produced, and engineered six solo albums and scored two independent films. He has been the musical director for a vast array of bands of all styles. His music has been used by: NPR, BigTex Video, Franklin-Covey, Working Horse Winery, GearHead Pictures, Quova, Showa University (Tokyo), The State of Alabama, QSR Magazine, University of Michigan, and WGBH.

Press/Reviews:

Currently, John can be found playing solo acoustic blues and jazz guitar around the Puget Sound area. If you are in the area, catch this jewel of a player hidden within the boundaries of the state of Washington!

Wow! That word almost describes how impressed I am with your CD. All the blues tunes are so well done, but track 7 just absolutely blows me away! Do you have any of these songs tabbed out? Will you adopt me? I would love to learn to play like you...

Anyway, just wanted to drop you a line that I got your album and it's great. All these years working in entertainment has made it so easy to cut through all the bullsh- that's out there, it's nice to hear a real player.

--- John Chamberlain, Acoustic Review

The stuff you are doing is really incredible. I remember reading Keith Richards say the first time he heard Robert Johnson he thought there were two guitars and only afterwards he knew it was just one doing the rhythm and the licks altogether. Well, it happened the same to me when I heard your music. Absolutely brilliant guitar playing by the way!
